BACKGROUND:

Briefly, on May 29, 2003, [redacted]
[redacted] Radio 4
TODAY program, reported that a source had told him that Downing Street ("Downing Street" is vernacular for #10 Downing Street, London, which is the address for the residence of Prime Minister Tony Blair and family, as well as offices for senior members of the UK Government) asked for certain intelligence to be given undue prominence in the UK Government's dossier on IRAQ's weapons of mass destruction (WMD).

b6
b7C

In a public presentation before Members of Parliament in the days leading up to the war in IRAQ, Prime Minister Blair presented his findings as to the basis for the war. His dossier has since come under frenzied political scrutiny in as much that WMD have not been found in IRAQ. The giving of "undue prominence" has since been regarded by UK media (television, print, and radio) as the Government's "sexing up" its dossier on IRAQ WMD to strengthen the case for war.

In early July, [redacted] advised the Downing Street chief of staff, and [redacted] - the Prime Minister's Director of Communications [redacted] [redacted] admitted to speaking to BBC's [redacted] Subsequent to that claim, Defence Secretary [redacted] wrote to the Director-General of the BBC requesting he provide the name of [redacted] source that represented the dossier had been sexed up. The BBC refused that and a subsequent request.

b6
b7C

In his second request, [redacted] revealed the name of Dr.
David Christopher Kelly as a possible source of information.

Re: [redacted] 09/02/2003

b7E
b3

Journalists were then given a number of facts about Dr. Kelly's career and background that appeared to have been aimed at assisting in uncovering his identity, which they did. Days later Dr. Kelly testified before the Government's Select Committee on Foreign Affairs. On July 18, 2003, his body was found in Oxfordshire, near his home in Abindon. The Coroner ruled the death a suicide.

As is standard procedure in most deaths in England and Wales, a Coroner certifies manner and means of death. In cases of suspicious deaths, a Coroner has the authority to conduct a criminal inquiry - call witnesses and conduct investigation (via the police). In the case of Dr. Kelly's death, Lord Hutton - a former Lord Chief Justice in his native Northern Ireland - was asked to conduct a Coroner's Inquiry into the circumstances surrounding Dr. Kelly's death, now referred to as the "Hutton" inquiry.

Given that senior members of the UK Government are being called as witnesses such as the Defence Secretary on August 27, and Prime Minister Blair on August 28, daily fodder has given rise to a UK media frenzy. [redacted] age [redacted] is testifying [redacted] As an indication of the serious nature of this inquiry, the Prime Minister testified that had BBC's [redacted] report been accurate it would have "merited my resignation".

b7C

Dr. Kelly is reported to be a government expert in WMD. He is alleged to have participated in the UN's WMD inspection in 1998 in IRAQ. [redacted]

Coroner ready to open new Kelly inquiry

○ BBC reporter's four-letter fury at 'outrageous' Panorama claims

By Laura Peek,
Dominic Kennedy
and David Charter

A CORONER is considering a full inquest into the death of David Kelly because he believes that the Hutton inquiry was unable to examine key details of his troubled past.

As previously unseen footage of Dr Kelly was broadcast on Panorama last night, The Times has learnt that police interviewed 500 people and took 300 witness statements. But fewer than 70 of them were passed to Lord Hutton.

Most were not handed on because police decided they were not relevant, but Nicholas Gardiner, the Oxfordshire Coroner, wants to see them for himself before accepting Lord Hutton's verdict next week.

At least five witnesses, including Mai Pederson, the American woman who introduced Dr Kelly to the Baha'i faith, refused to release their statements. Mr Gardiner said: "What their motives might be for not handing over their statements I have no idea but I think I ought to see them."

He will meet senior Thames Valley Police officers this week to demand access to the documents unseen by Lord Hutton. Mr Gardiner may also look at fresh information about Dr Kelly's lonely childhood, including the collapse of his parents' marriage and his abandonment by his father.

The disclosures come as Andrew Gilligan, the BBC reporter heavily criticised in Panorama's examination of the Kelly affair, launched a scathing counter-attack against his BBC colleagues. In the programme John Ware, the Panorama journalist, said that the BBC was on a "shaky foundation" because Mr Gilligan had already been "hailed over the coals" for loose language before his controversial report on the Iraq dossier.

Mr Gilligan told The Times: "It is fing outrageous. I am furious that John Ware has said this about me without even putting it to me."

Mr Gilligan said that he could recall one meeting with Richard Sambrook, his manager, where he was criticised. "It was a meeting to say how well I had done in Iraq and I was criticised over one matter. It was 95 per cent praise. In no sense could it be described as a hauling over the coals." Mr Gilligan said that he had spoken to Mr Sambrook last night who agreed that he had not been hauled over the coals. Mr Sambrook declined to comment.

Panorama also showed Dr Kelly saying that Iraq's biological weapons could be used within "days or weeks" rather than 45 minutes, as the Government's dossier claimed.

A week before Lord Hutton issues his report on the circumstances surrounding Dr Kelly's death, The Times can disclose more about his troubled childhood in South Wales.

Another document not seen by Lord Hutton was the will of Dr Kelly's father, which suggests that the pair were never reconciled after the family fell apart. It is just one of many documents that Mr Gardiner is likely to study before deciding whether to pursue his own full inquest. The Hutton inquiry also failed to investigate his relationship with Mai Pederson, the Arab-American military linguist who initiated him into the Baha'i faith. She was questioned by Thames Valley Police but her evidence was not shown to Lord Hutton. The coroner will study the statements in conjunction with the Hutton report when it is published next Wednesday. He will also consider any other information about Dr Kelly's life that he deems relevant before deciding whether to resume the inquest.

He said he had already received and read scores of letters offering fresh information about Dr Kelly in recent weeks. He will make a formal announcement of his decision in court but this will not be until at least 28 days after the publication of Lord Hutton's report for legal reasons.

The inquest was adjourned under section 17a of the 1988 Coroners Act, which allows a public inquiry conducted by a judge to fulfil the function of an inquest, and Lord Hutton's report will include a verdict similar to that recorded at a coroner's court. The coroner could still hold his own hearing.

A spokeswoman for the inquiry said: "Lord Hutton will present his report to Lord Falconer [of Thoroton, the Lord Chancellor, who] will provide a copy to the coroner. The coroner will read it and make a decision about whether there are grounds for him to reopen his inquest or whether he is satisfied with the findings."

Title: UK GOVERNMENT "HUTTON" INQUIRY INTO
DR. DAVID CHRISTOPHER KELLY SUICIDE
FOLLOWING ALLEGATION UK GOVERNMENT
"SEXED UP" DOSSIER ON IRAQI WEAPONS

Synopsis: To advise that London is closing its investigation a second time.

Details: Re London EC, same file, serial 21.

The Hutton Inquiry, an independent United Kingdom investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Dr David Christopher Kelly, concluded taking testimony from witnesses. Lord Hutton issued his report in early 2004 exonerating any government official of responsibility for the 'sexing up' of the prime minister's dossier to go to war with the US in Iraq, and found no basis to conclude that Dr. Kelly had been killed (but rather, he in fact had committed suicide).

By letter dated January 22, 2004, ALAT [REDACTED] wrote to [REDACTED] to inquire about securing a copy of any notes taken by his officers [REDACTED] This request was refused.

b6
b7C

Based on a review of the file, in concert with the results of the Hutton Inquiry, it is deemed prudent to again close this file. All inquiries have been concluded at Legat London.
